Graduate Student Travel Fund

The Travel Fund provides financial support for graduate students who are supervised by Faculty in the Department of Cellular and Physiological Sciences, Division of Anatomy & Cell Biology, and who are attending an official conference, symposium or other scientific meeting to present the results of their research (either orally or by poster).

Funding levels will vary depending on the number of applicants and the resources. Typically, an award is in the region of $300. As such, students are strongly advised to seek additional support from elsewhere (including their supervisor's operating funds, meeting awards and/or funding from the U.B.C. Faculty of Graduate Studies). Students who are not registered in the Division of Anatomy & Cell Biology Graduate Program must also apply to their own Departmental travel fund, if one exists. Additional funding from outside sources will not prevent a student from receiving support from the Anatomy & Cell Biology Travel Fund.

Due to the limited funds available, students will be limited to a maximum of one travel award during the course of an M.Sc. degree and three additional travel awards if they transfer to the Ph.D. program from the M.Sc. program. Students who enter the Ph.D. program directly will be eligible to receive a maximum of four travel awards during the course of their studies.
